

FELINE NAIL TRIM

Look at your cat's toenails, you will notice a pinkish/reddish color inside the white nail. That is called the quick (pictured below). You do not want to cut that. If you do, a) it is painful for your cat and they will let you know it by screaming, scratching, or running away and b) it will start to bleed. You have to either use Kwik Stop or you can make a paste out of flour and water and pack it into the nail that is bleeding to make it stop. Once the nails are trimmed, you can use a nail file to file down the sharp edges if you cat allows you to.

Tip: If you play with your cat's paws when they are kittens, they will become used to you playing with them and they won't put up too much of a fight when it's time for a nail trim.
